The Soviet Union expects to have between 50 and 75 of its new Blackjack bombers flying by 1990. It was formerly designated RAM-P (AW&ST Dec. 14, 1981, p. 17). First deliveries of the Blackjack will be received by Soviet long-range forces in 1987, according to Rep. Robert K. Dornan (R.-Calif.). The swing-wing Blackjack, larger than the Rockwell B-1 bomber, is designed to carry cruise missiles and also has conventional and nuclear bomb capability. Dornan, who leaves Congress this year, said his information on production levels came from the Central Intelligence Agency and the Defense Intelligence Agency.
